

- GET IN STATE -

Leadership is the most important aspect in taking control of your business. When you embody confidence, the team will follow your lead. Confidence is a state that we can turn on.

Contrary to popular belief, confidence does not need to be developed “through” experience.

You can create a state of confidence and “tap into it” at will. You can enter every team meeting knowing that you are the boss in the room and lead your team to achieve the best possible results by doing it your way!

When was a time that you felt extremely confident, you just knew you could accomplish anything?

Who is someone that you look up to that you’d like to behave like in your meetings?

What is it that they do, that you admire, and makes them come across so confident?

What are three words that you would like to describe the way that you come across in your meetings?
